

Advocacy Toolkit

The California Innocence Coalition (CIC) consists of the three innocence projects in California, the California Innocence Project, the Northern California Innocence Project and the Loyola Project for the Innocent. The mission of our coalition is to advocate for change in California laws and policy based on the devastating impact of convicting the innocent. Collectively, the California Innocence Coalition has won the freedom of over 70 wrongly imprisoned individuals who collectively spent over 750 years in prison for crimes they did not commit.

Specifically, this toolkit has been put together with the purpose of advocating for the implementation of Senate Bill 981 - Criminal Procedure: Factual Innocence. Read a summary and description of SB 981 here. SB 981 is important as it “further extends SB 446-passed in 2021- by seeking to ensure that the two processes in seeking compensation for the wrongfully convicted (either through the Victim’s Compensation Board or the courts) are aligned and not unduly burdensome on the state litigators responding to these.” Look at number 3, ‘Contact Your Legislator’ of the below list for a letter to write to your legislature in support of SB 981.

1. Learn about Innocence Issues

To be an effective advocate, you first need to know the facts. Acquaint yourself with prevalent issues in our criminal justice system that need major reforms, such as police misconduct, ineffective assistance of counsel, and compensation for exonerees. As well as the causes of wrongful convictions.

2. Understand State Policy-Making

To advocate on behalf of CIC, it’s important to understand the basics of State policymaking.

Californians are represented by 120 legislators: 40 senators and 80 assembly members. These legislators draft and introduce bills, debate their merit, and vote to pass or kill the bills. These bills are how we can make real change for the clients of innocence organizations. That’s why the CIC policy team is dedicated to working with local and state officials to submit bills that hold police and prosecutors accountable for fair investigations and trials.

Legislators collect ideas for legislation in late winter for the following year. They meet with policy experts and advocates, like CIC, to propose bill ideas. Legislators author bills, but organizations can co-sponsor legislation and help the author move it through the legislative process using their own resources.

Once written, bills must pass through committees and floor votes in the house and senate before being sent to the Governor for signature. You can keep track of bills that will affect our justice system. Current list of bills that are in the legislative process are listed on the California legislature's website or LegiScan.

3. Contact Your Legislator

The job of each legislator is to represent the interests of their constituents. In other words, they work for you. Contacting your legislator by letter, email, or phone is an effective way to affect change. You can find your legislators here. Use the following tips to ensure your message gets through.

Write a letter/email

- Use your full name and your address to make it clear that you are a constituent.
- Use your own words. Mass correspondences from organized campaigns often use identical language and are more easily ignored.
- Timing is key. Write your legislator and the chairperson of the committee dealing with the bill while it is under consideration.
- Be clear, brief, and constructive. Identify the bill or issue of concern in the title or subject line. Provide a brief explanation of why you support or oppose the bill/issue. If you have a personal connection, use concrete examples of how this bill would affect you, your family, community, or business.

Re: SB 981 - Support

Dear [Senator/Assembly Member] [Last Name]

I am a resident of [city/town] located in your district. This letter is in reference to SB 981, which is scheduled to be heard in [your committee / the Assembly / the Senate] soon.

Many people who have been exonerated in California have limited ways to ensure they are compensated for their wrongful incarceration. As of 2021, the burden for exonerated people who are seeking compensation has been shifted to the Attorney General in compensation proceedings through the Victim's Compensation Board. This shift has not yet applied in the courts. These individuals deserve justice and a clear path to compensation. [personalize with your thoughts on the issue and how they impact you personally]. For these reasons, I strongly support SB 981.

Thank you for taking the time to review my concerns on this piece of legislation. After this bill comes up for a vote, I would appreciate being informed as to how you voted and why. I am available to answer questions or provide testimony on this important issue.

Sincerely,
[Your name]

4. Advocate Among Your Network

Advocating on behalf of CIC doesn't solely extend to legislative outreach. We encourage you to advocate for innocence issues throughout your network, by spreading the word via social media or submitting a letter to the editor for your local paper. Here are some tips to consider:

Social media

- Follow CIC on Facebook, Twitter, and Instagram to hear the latest from us and share our contact with your own followers.
- Follow or 'friend' elected representatives that are proponents of CIP innocence issues and publically share your support for reform.
- Post regularly and share credible, timely information about innocence cases, legislation, and news from trusted sources.
- Use relevant hashtags to link to broader conversations: #cainnocencecoalition #CApolitics, #CALeg
- Use your posts to encourage friends and family to engage in issues offline (e.g., calling representative or attending events and rallies).
- Mention elected representatives in relevant posts to catch their attention and encourage interaction (e.g., on Twitter you can use their handle @RepresentativeX).

Write a letter to the editor

Contact your local newspaper to write about a timely and important issue. Depending on the readership of the publication, this has the potential to reach thousands of residents, as well as key law makers. A few tips to get you going:

- Think about timing. Is there a case being reviewed or a bill that will shortly be voted on? Consider submitting a letter around key events or anniversaries.
- Make it personal. Explain how this issue affects you, your family or your community. Use examples from your own experience.
- Keep it short and simple. Focus your letter on one key issue or argument and keep to the word limit set by the publication. In most cases, it will be under 200-250 words.

5. Serve as a Juror

When you are called upon for jury duty and you are able, serve as a juror. If selected, listen to the judge's instructions and utilize your knowledge of innocence issues — such as eyewitness identification, flawed forensic science and in-custody informant testimony— to scrutinize evidence presented at trial.

While the wheels of change can move slowly, clear and persistent engagement with elected officials can help us move closer to justice for the innocent. Every action makes a difference and we're grateful for your support.
